

HIPAA

Just a quick note on the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (HIPAA), which protects patient medical records and other health information. A HIPAA release form is required if you want to allow other people access to your medical records when you are healthy. A Medical Power of Attorney is necessary in order for your agent to have access to this information when/if you become incapacitated.